AN OLD-TIME VILLAGE IS PROPOSED FOR HONOLULU

Pauoa Valley Suggested as Site for an Aboriginal Hamlet, With Grass Houses, Mat and Hat Weavers and Spear Throwers.

A native village, as nearly like the villages during the missionary days as it is possible to have under modern conditions, is planned to be established somewhere in Honolulu, preferably in Pauoa Valley. Such a village is now being projected by J. J. Williams, the veteran photographer, who in times past was one of Hawaii's best tourist agents. A large number of business men have expressed a favorable opinion of the project and Governor Carter is said to be in hearty sympathy with it.

"The idea of a native village has been in my mind for some time," said Mr. Williams yesterday. "The first thing that tourists ask for on arriving here, is a sight of old native houses and customs. Their ideas and general information of Hawaii have always had to do with natives, grass houses, primitive customs, etc. Can they find any of these things here? No. Let any one ask you where he can catch a glimpse of the old-time native methods of living, and ten to one you can't inform him."

"Up to the time of Kalakaua's death I was an earnest advocate of tourist travel to Hawaii. When I went to the coast I made it my business to get tourists to come here. But now people go away from here disgusted. This disgust is taking hold of the agencies on the coast."

"It's all right when tourists are here for a day, or just while their steamers are in port. They drive about the city, lunch and dine at the hotels, hear band music, or a quintet club, and they say 'Isn't it all beautiful.' But when a tourist is here for a week, you are at your wits' ends to tell him where to go or what to see. To see natives now in anything like a primitive state you have to go into the tenement district, amongst old shacks of buildings and you may see some old-time natives. But their surroundings are filthy and they make no appeal to the tourist except perhaps, to excite his disgust."

"Now what would be better than to establish a clean native village or colony where grass houses with large lanais may be erected, flowers and taro grown, where tourists may see how poi is made, can see women weaving hats and mats, men and women attired in bright colors playing and singing, and where the old-time royal hulas may be given with the dancers attired properly. By these dances I do not mean the present-day style of hula, which is not the hula of the natives but a conglomeration of hooche-coche and Indian dances. On steamer days what would appeal to strangers more than to see on the wharves Hawaiian women mounted on ponies and wearing the bright-colored paus, the cloth of the skirts almost touching the ground."

"Such a place would pay. It would revive the old-time industries of hat and mat weaving, lei-making, poi-making, national dancing, spear-throwing. Lutaus could be given, not only for local people, but for strangers. The fees for admission to such a place would keep it up, and the people would get good support from their industry. There are good Hawaiians and fine-looking Hawaiians, to be obtained without difficulty for such a village. Following is a circular which has been issued:

"One of the chief objects in visiting a foreign country, is to see not only the country, but to observe the mode of living and the habits and customs of its people."

"This is particularly so concerning the newer and little visited parts of the world, and unless this can be accomplished, much of the incentive for the trip is wanting."

"Twenty to twenty-five years ago it was possible to see the grass house, culture of taro, and the general modes of life of the native Hawaiian, at almost any place in the Islands, as it existed prior to and for a long time after the advent of the white man, but today with the absorption of much of the watered lands, for the culture of cane and rice, such sights are rare, and only to be seen in the outlying and untraveled portions of the group."

"In anticipation of the possible advent of a regular line of tourists, it is proposed to establish a native colony, where all these features can be seen, with the least expenditure of both time and money."

"It is the intention to form a native colony of respectable people, provide them with comfortable grass houses, and taro lands sufficient to raise all the taro required for their subsistence, and where they can grow as many other varieties of fruits, vegetables and flowers as they may desire."

"To procure natives proficient in making hats, mats, leis or any other products that are purely Hawaiian, and to include among their number some who are proficient and capable of rendering the ancient national dances of their country."

"To consummate this object, will require a tract of at least ten acres of well watered land, and easily accessible from town; on this land will be erected grass houses, after the old and most approved plan, and each house will be provided with the simple implements for domestic use."

"It is the intention to have hats, mats, and the various varieties of leis, in which the native Hawaiian women are so expert, made on the grounds, and if possible to also introduce some of the ancient pastimes, among which will be spear throwing."

"The colony will be supplied with ponies, and one of the requirements particularly on steamer days will be to ride with the old and picturesque pa-u. "One or more large grass lanais will be erected, which can be used for the rendering of the national dances, the giving of a luau, or for the guests if they elect to dance."

"Sweet potatoes, bread-fruits, mangoes, papayas, coconuts, lauhala, maile, in short all varieties of plants and flowers so dear to the native, including taro will be grown, and taro patches it not already there will be made, and the planting and cultivating so adjusted that it can be seen in all stages, from preparing the crop to harvesting, and the imu or oven, showing the mode of nearly every phase of ancient Hawaiian life can be observed, and in a manner not to outrage the feelings of the most fastidious, and it will be the aim, to so conduct this colony, that not only visiting tourists, but residents of the islands will find a real pleasure in visiting it."

ATTRACTIONS AT THE CHINESE FAIR

Mrs. S. L. Newcombe will have charge of a very pretty and interesting booth at the Chinese fair. On one side of the entrance will be placed a large shoe of dolls, presided over by a little Chinese "Old Woman that Lived in the Shoe." In the opposite side will be a paper flower counter. In the main part of the booth Mrs. Humphris and Mrs. Hawes will conduct a Jarley wax works show and Mrs. Niblack will assist Mrs. Newcombe at the shoe and paper flower stands. The lemonade committee will consist of Mrs. Walbridge as chairman with Miss Alice Jones, Miss Parke and Miss Renne Catron as her able assistants.

INFLUENZA is always more or less prevalent at this season of the year. This disease is very similar to a severe cold and if allowed to take its course is liable to cause serious results. The best treatment for influenza is to avoid exposure and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This medicine gives immediate relief and if used as directed, will ward off all dangerous consequences. For sale by all dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., Ltd., agents for Hawaii.
